

The Donor Advised Fund – Part 3

Who Should Consider a DAF?

In an earlier article, we defined Donor Advised Funds and outlined a few applications for using such a fund. In our most recent article on DAFs, we gave reasons why wise stewards consider establishing these funds. In this article, we’re going to outline some of the benefits of DAFs as well as situations in which these benefits are maximized.

To review, a Donor Advised Fund is a “charitable giving fund” that functions much like a private foundation but without the cost and red tape. They can be established with as little as $5,000 cash, stock, real estate, or other approved assets. Donors realize tax benefits in the year of the donation. They can then advise DSF to make distributions over time from their funds to the charities of their choice. Funds in the DAF can grow income-tax-free while awaiting distribution.

WHO SHOULD CONSIDER A DONOR ADVISED FUND?

Someone who...

- ... needs time to make thoughtful giving decisions
- ... wants to support several charities with one large gift
- ... desires maximum flexibility to change beneficiaries
- ... wants to maximize giving through non-cash assets

- ... prefers to keep charitable giving confidential
- ... prefers a simple substitute for a private foundation
- ... needs end-of-year tax deductions
- ... desires to involve family members in giving

Think about the difference you can make and the good you can do for the cause of Jesus Christ!
